Dear Friends

Since entering a new century 15 years ago, the number of practicing DOs has nearly doubled from 45,000 to over 90,000. That’s a tremendous amount of growth! During this time, the American Osteopathic Foundation has grown too, and has continually evolved to better meet the needs of the osteopathic profession.

We consistently evaluate how and where we can have the greatest impact on the osteopathic profession, and have updated our program services accordingly.

We’ve built on the spirit of osteopathic medicine and have created new ways to reward excellence—growing our Honors program from a small non-descript event 10 years ago to a 500+ person black-tie celebration during OMED 2015 in Orlando.

We have created innovative ways to engage members of our profession by expanding opportunities to volunteer for public service activities at home and abroad.

It’s been truly gratifying to be part of such an amazing profession. Just when you think you’ve seen it all, you meet an osteopathic physician whose commitment to community and patients leaves you in awe of their selfless dedication. There are so many inspiring stories in our profession and so many more to be told when it comes to DOs committed to making the world a better place. Thank you for the trust, support and friendship you continue to extend to the American Osteopathic Foundation. We could not have come this far without you.

Stephan S. Downey
Executive Director
The AOF provides osteopathic physicians, residents and students the support to provide volunteer service to care for the most desperate communities around the globe. Through the Rossnick Humanitarian Grant and the Ready Relief Box program the AOF has supported 45 osteopathic physicians and students visiting 17 different countries. The AOF also brought together 35 osteopathic medical students for the sixth annual AOF HumanTouch Student Leadership Project to assist disabled residents in Lee County, Virginia—the birthplace of A.T. Still, MD, DO.

USA

APPALACHIA
Osteopathic medical students from around the country came together to provide much needed support for two Appalachian families living with disabilities and fixed incomes facing difficult decisions on a daily basis, often choosing between food or taking their prescribed medication. The students took on carpentry, painting, cleaning, roofing, and landscaping. This included building two wheelchair accessible ramps, which allowed one homeowner to go outside her home for the first time in three years. The project left a lasting impression on student participants and made a tremendous difference in the lives of the home owners. (Pictured above)

CHICAGO, IL
Helping Hands House of Delegates—Organized by the AOF for members of the Advocates for the American Osteopathic Association (AAOA). Volunteers worked with adults with intellectual/developmental disabilities and mental illness at the Neumann Family Services Community Center; visiting with residents, working on craft projects and building a new outside garden.

ORLANDO, FL
OMED Helping Hands—An annual hands-on service project designed to give OMED 2015 attendees and friends an opportunity to give back to the OMED host city. On October 16, volunteers went to Give Kids the World, a 79-acre nonprofit resort where children with life-threatening illnesses and their families are treated to a weeklong, fantasy vacation. Volunteers interacted with families, painted and landscaped. (Pictured below)

READY RELIEF BOX
Working with Heart to Heart International, this pharmacy in a box provides medication and supplies that physicians can easily bring with them on medical missions.

ROSSNICK HUMANITARIAN GRANT
A grant provided to physicians and students to help offset the cost of their travel on medical missions.
"The ability to make such a personal impact on people who have limited access to medical resources is the most rewarding part of participating in a mission trip."
—Elaine Yu, OMS I, Freemont, CA, WesternU/COMP

"There are 19,000 people living in small villages nearby with over 1,000 orphaned children and 2,000 families living in starvation. We provided health care and also handed out soap and body lotion to each patient. They consider these items precious and were thankful."
—Ken Root, DO, Fountain Hills, AZ, Malawi

"This experience has shaped the type of physician I want to become: compassionate, open-hearted, and culturally competent."
—Melissa Haberbach, OMS I, Vallejo, CA, Touro-CA

“This trip would not have been possible if it weren’t for the help of the AOF. It is such a wonderful gift to be able to take a trip like this and give back.”
—Forest P. Allen, DO, Chicago, IL

African Americans and Hispanics are among the fastest growing segments of the US population, yet they are one of the most severely underrepresented minority groups in medicine.

What is standing in the way?
Finances and navigating the complicated path into and through medical school are just a few of the obstacles for minorities seeking a career as an osteopathic physician.

Tyree Winters, DO, understands first-hand how economics can make a difference in graduating from osteopathic medical school.
“During my third year of medical school, I found out I was not eligible for additional federal loans to finish my studies. Just when I thought all hope was lost, I found out I had been awarded the William G. Anderson, DO, Minority Scholarship. It was the exact amount I needed to finish school.” he said. “Without the scholarship, I would not be able to be the physician I am today.”

Dr. Winters’ situation is not unique. In fact, nearly 70% of black students who don’t finish college blame high student loan debt as the reason—making the long-term investment in medical school seem not feasible to many.

“The William G. Anderson, DO, Minority Scholarship gives students those tools to continue with osteopathic medical school training. I worked hard. I just needed the resources to finish the job. The scholarship led me down a path that helped me become part of a premiere pediatric program,” said Dr. Winters, a 2005 recipient of the scholarship and Ohio University Heritage College of Osteopathic Medicine graduate.

Now the Director for Pediatric Weight and Wellness Program, Associate Program Director of Pediatric Residents at Children’s Hospital in Newark, New Jersey, Dr. Winters says that public education and awareness of osteopathic medicine is necessary in order to increase minority enrollment in osteopathic medical school.
To mark the 15th anniversary of the William G. Anderson, DO Minority Scholarship, the AOF aimed to raise $60,000 at Honors 2015. Audience members donated nearly $100,000 via text pledges to Mobile Cause, broadcast on screens throughout the evening, and an additional $250,000 was donated by AOF Board Member Jeff Heatherington, LHD (Hon.) president and CEO of FamilyCare, Inc. in Portland, Oregon, pictured above (right) with Robin Richardson, DO, FamilyCare Inc., Board Chairman and William G. Anderson, DO.

In 2014, the percentage of students graduating from osteopathic medical schools in the United States who were African American or Hispanic. (AACOM)

In 2011, he founded Motivating Pathways to help bring more diversity in medicine. He rents a tour bus with fellow medical professionals, and visits different historically black colleges and high schools in areas with large minority populations to conduct free full-day workshops about the osteopathic profession, and other medical careers, and shares how to apply and graduate from medical school.

“Most students can’t pay to go to these conferences. They might be single parents and can’t take off work. So instead of having them come to us, we use our vacation time and go to them. We have mentored so many students, in fact, one of my students was just accepted to osteopathic medical school,” he said.

Dr. Winters understands the legacy of Dr. Anderson, and wants to pay it forward. “William G. Anderson, DO, paved the way for me, and I want to make sure that legacy doesn’t stop with me. Just the same way someone reached down, grabbed my hand and pulled me up, I need to reach my hand down to pull someone else up,” said Dr. Winters.

Lifetime Achievement Award:
Murray Goldstein, DO, MPH

Dr. Goldstein, a true pioneer, paved the way to success and acceptance for other osteopathic physicians and fostered an environment for scientifically rigorous osteopathic research during his more than 60-year career. He was the first osteopathic physician to be appointed a commissioned medical officer in the uniformed services (the US Public Health Service), the first osteopathic medical officer to achieve a star rank, the first osteopathic physician to serve as a director of an Institute at the National Institutes of Health and the first to be an Assistant Surgeon General.

Physician of the Year:
Craig Dietz, DO

As medical director for the National Association of Free Clinics and chief medical officer and director of clinical research for the Kansas City CARE Clinic—a site that treats 6,000 primary care patients and 1,000 HIV/AIDS patients each year, Dr. Dietz innately understands how to serve those most in need of healthcare locally and nationwide. Dr. Dietz also founded and serves as lead researcher at the largest HIV clinical trial facility in the region.

W. Douglas Ward, PhD, Educator of the Year:
J. Michael Finley, DO

A passionate educator and a third generation osteopathic physician committed to osteopathic medicine, J. Michael Finley, DO, oversees graduate medical education for the Western region of the United States as the chief academic officer for OPTI—West Educational Consortium. He has mentored hundreds of students and residents at Western University of Health Sciences, College of Osteopathic Medicine of the Pacific (WesternU-COMP) in Pomona, California, where he currently serves as the associate dean of graduate and clinical medical education.

Grants

AOA’s Advocacy for Healthy Partnership Conference
A grant to the AOA to provide support for an annual leadership in advocacy conference. Bringing together leadership from the AOA and osteopathic state and specialty organizations, attendees received leadership development and advocacy training to help strengthen their organizations.

A.T. Still Museum of Osteopathic Medicine Interactive Website
A grant to support the Museum of Osteopathic Medicine’s interactive website geared to better serve potential patients, family members, and the global public to demonstrate the relevancy of osteopathic medicine in today’s healthcare environment.

Institute of Medicine’s (IOM) Anniversary Fellowship Program
A grant to support an endowment at the IOM to fund the first osteopathic fellowship position to exist in perpetuity, in collaboration with the AOA and AACOM. Creagh Milford Jr., DO, MPH (’08 MWU/CCOM) began his two-year fellowship in 2014, participating in evidence-based healthcare and public health studies that affect the nation.

NOMA Health Fair for the Homeless
A grant to support the National Osteopathic Medical Association’s (NOMA) Health Fair for the Homeless at the Orlando Union Rescue Mission. Attendees were provided health education and screenings. In addition the AOF hosted a shoe drive at its Chicago headquarters to provide sneakers for the homeless who participated.

DONORS CORNER
Honorary Chairs of Honors 2015, Janet Burns, PT and Ron Burns, DO, are long-time supporters of the AOF.

What AOF programs have you participated in?
We attend Honors every year and are so proud to see the amazing DOs recognized for what they consider “a normal day’s work.” We also participate in the Helping Hands service projects, where we see the true colors of the osteopathic profession shine within the community.

Why do you donate to the AOF?
Our gifts to the AOF are truly supporting an efficient, life giving, and effective philanthropic organization. We give to many organizations, but it is special to be involved with the AOF.

Why is it important for others in the profession to donate to the AOF?
The AOF offers outstanding management of monetary gifts, and is a safe, impactful way to give to others. From the outstanding event, Honors, to the HumanTouch program and humanitarian grants, the AOF offers a venue for everyone to give.

You Can Make a Difference
Make the AOF your charity of choice to ensure that the profession continues to make a difference in the health of others and provides leadership when it comes to serving the neediest populations at home and abroad. Your gift helps promote the osteopathic profession and change the world.
